Then, of course, you remember that, in 1978, a 300D was a $21,000 car in the United States. Inflation would make that an $80,000 vehicle today. Those of us who recall these cars in their Seventies...

The price tag for a new 300D in 1978 was $20,911. That ' s close to 75 grand in 2013 bucks, for a slow car that was reasonably luxurious but utterly bling-free. This one made it to just 216,623 miles during its 35 years on the planet.

Mercedes-Benz W123 coupes aren ' t so easy to find these days, though I was able to spot this Crusher-bound ' 78 280CE last year. Last week, in a different Denver-area yard, I ran across today ' s find: an oil-burning ' 78 300CD. With the 3-liter OM617 five-cylinder diesel engine, a strong contender for the Most Reliable Car Engine of All Time Award, these things usually get scrapped only ...

Before I was transplanted into America, I lived in Eastern Europe. 240D and 200D (55bhp, you heard right) were the most common models, while 300TD was considered excessively complicated and thirsty, and 300D was just an oddball. Imagine trying to climb up a slippery hill in winter in the 200D.

I have owned 4 240D's, a 300TD turbo, and a non turbo 300D. I do all my own work, I just got through stripping the 300D non turbo to the bare block, boring and putting in new pistons. I have done a similar job to a 240D and can probably do the same work on a 240D in about 2/3 the time it takes on a 300D.

The 3-litre five-cylinder diesel engine received a proper nomenclature for W123, matching the engine displacement: 300 D instead of 240 D 3.0 on previous W114/W115. In the autumn 1978, the power output was increased in 240 D from 65 PS (48 kW; 64 hp) to 72 PS (53 kW; 71 hp) and in the 280 E from 177PS to 185 PS.

I have one of each, a '82 300D and a '83 240D, and they are completely different beasts. The 300D has about twice the power of the 240D, but the 240D is much simpler. The 240D is a great "around town" car but it isn't really suitable for current highway speeds, they were sold when the U.S. speed limit was 55 mph and they are not really happy above about 70.
