Work experience. Work experience is vital if you are looking for a place on a course to become a veterinary nurse and is usually an entry requirement. The more experience you can get, the better! We recommend not only getting experience within a vet practice (ideally at an approved training practice) but in a variety of animal-related environments. For example, you could get experience at a cattery or kennel, rehoming centre or even a local farm or abattoir.

“Work hard and get a good few years’ experience as a police constable before specialising; this will give you the insight and skills needed in dog handling. Other forces like the RAF and Army can train you to be a dog handler, but if you want to be out day-to-day on dog-handling operations, I would recommend a career with the police.
