Since public funds are the cornerstone of sustainable financing for UHC in most countries, the public financial management (PFM) system - the institutions, policies and processes that govern the use of public

Public Financial Management (PFM) challenges differ in size and scope across countries. Increased revenue for the health sector alone will not achieve UHC goals unless well-functioning PFM systems are in place. To leverage PFM reform in the health sector, WHO provides support in the following areas:

The absence of appropriate financial management competencies has impeded progress in advancing the field of public health finance. It also inhibits the ability to professionalize this sector of the workforce. Financial managers should play a critical role by providing information relevant to decision making.

Sustainability of the governmental public health system is dependent principally on the financial health of state and local public health agencies. This is a challenge since public health programs and services are often provided in fiscally strapped environments (e.g., government revenue declines, budget reductions, economic recessions, unfunded mandates).
