Rosamund Leigh, the last in the line of the Witches of Leigh, and Malcolm Forrester, last in the line of ancient foresters, meet on a train and begin a whirlwind ride pursued by the Druid Merlin.Malcolm discovers that there is a dark history between his family and that of the house of Leigh, linked by the disturbing presence of the ancient Druid. He is thrust into a whirlwind dash across time and space with the girl at his side, pursued by the Druid, and resulting in a final confrontation between the powers of light and those of dark.In this story of dark fantasy the author turns our usual view of Arthurian legend completely on its head providing the reader with an insight into what it would have been like if Arthur Pendragon had not been the benevolent wise King of Legend, and his trusty blade Excalibur not the shining talisman of which we have always been led to believe.

Any girl who goes into the Forbidden Forest never comes out again. Except the one who did. Larkin should have been watching her little sister. Should have paid more attention to the trees looming over her family's fields. Now Sela is gone. Knowing full well the danger of the forest and its beast, Larkin goes after her anyway. With her sister clutched in her arms, she manages to escape, but not before discovering the truth lurking beneath the wicked boughs. She may have evaded the beast once, but with the full force of his magic now fixated on her, she isn't sure how much longer she can resist.
