Kitty's adventures are very funny; Cox tries hard to recapture and emulate the language of the original era (St Clare's was written during the latter stages of World War II) and is beset with the usual problems and conflicts in boarding school life: the problems with Amanda and her second form stepsister Helen, the third form's battle with the second form with whom they're forced to share a common room, and both forms' problems with deputy head girl Margaret.

Another Pamela Cox concoction, Kitty at St. Clare's is the sixth book in the timeline of the series - the third form. Cox decides to abandon all the nice things Blyton could do and picked on the one thing that annoys me - stereotyping people based on their nationality. Such stereotyping and racism can be overlooked coming from an author writing in the 1940s in the midst of a raging war, but ...

Expect more mischief at St Clare's! Between 1941 and 1946, Enid Blyton wrote six novels set at St Clare's. Books 5, 6 and 9 are authorised sequels of the series written by Pamela Cox and feature storylines set in between the original Blyton novels. These books were published in 2000/2008 and are unillustrated.

Kitty at St Clare's by Enid Blyton | Waterstones
Claudine at St. Clare's is the fifth novel in the St. Clare's series by Enid Blyton. The narrative follows the O'Sullivan twins, Patricia and Isabel, and their adventures at exclusive boarding school St Clare's. The book introduces four new characters: Claudine, the French mistress' niece; Eileen, whose mother joins the school as matron; Pauline, a wannabe rich girl; and Angela, a rich and ...
